SCTE Expo Focuses on L&D Experience with Dr. Jim Kirkpatrick, the creator of the New World Kirkpatrick Model, Addressing How to Reinvent Training

Future of work innovators speaking about limitless learning at Expo include Julie Hiipakka of Deloitte, who will deliver the keynote

EXTON, Pa. — (October 6, 2021) — The Society of Cable Telecommunications Engineers (SCTE), a CableLabs® subsidiary, has announced that the L&D Experience will take a central role at SCTE® Cable-Tec Expo® 2021, with experts discussing how the pandemic has re-shaped learning, particularly the use of technology, and how organizations can pivot to remain relevant and deliver emerging technologies to benefit employees and customers.

“This year’s L&D program promises to be a robust and engaging discussion about the intersection of technology and learning, preparing the workforce of tomorrow,” said Jill Banks, SCTE director of Learning Operations. “SCTE has been focusing on continuous learning through content and superior data reporting to support innovative training methods. We’re very excited to hear from the experienced lineup of professionals who are at the top of the L&D field.”

Dr. Jim Kirkpatrick, senior consultant with Kirkpatrick Partners, is renowned as a visionary and an expert in training evaluation and as the creator of the New World Kirkpatrick Model. Dr. Kirkpatrick will share how to structure initiatives so they enhance on-the-job performance and impact the bottom line.

The theme for Expo’s L&D Experience is “unleash the power of limitless learning.” Nancy Murphy, executive director, Learning & Workforce Capability, Cox Communications, is chair for this year’s L&D Experience. Julie Hiipakka, vice president, Learning & Leadership Research Leader for Deloitte Consulting, will deliver the keynote. Julie brings 23 years of professional experience of L&D, talent management, and professional services, to her discussion of how businesses can connect learning, talent, and organizational change efforts to organizational goals and strategy.

“The most important element for any organization seeking to keep its workforce skilled and informed is to incorporate the latest technological advancements into an L&D strategy that factors in the human experience,” said Nancy Murphy. “Emphasizing and executing on the importance of L&D to the industry facilitates high-performing teams, measurable results, satisfied customers, and happier employees.”
